

The Changing Role of Media for Financial Advisors

August 31, 2020

Executive Summary:

This research examines the growing role of media as an influencer of/for financial advisors. We start by assessing the current landscape of financial advisors, including how they spend their time and addressing some of the common hurdles they face in their day-to-day activities. Next, we examine the information sources currently used by financial advisors and identify the most important factors influencing their product and/or fund selections.

As media plays an increasingly critical role in influencing the behaviors of financial advisors globally, it has never been more important for asset managers to understand these dynamics and how to best connect with their FA clients.

Methodology:

In Q2 2020, Greenwich Associates conducted online interviews with 1,124 financial advisors across the world. Respondents were asked a series of questions about their consumption of different media sources, the operations of their financial advisory business, and differentiators in the decision-making process. This research study was commissioned by LinkedIn.

Our suite of analytics and insights encompass all key performance metrics and drivers: market share, revenue performance, client relationship share and quality, operational excellence, return on equity, behavioral drivers, and industry evolution.

For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.
