

U.S. Capital Markets Performance During COVID: Equities

November 10, 2020

Executive Summary:

U.S. equity markets are widely recognized as the most efficient in the world, with deep pools of accessible liquidity, a well-established market data regime and a sound and predictable regulatory framework.

Throughout 2019, average daily volumes in the U.S. equities markets topped just over 7 billion shares per day. Meanwhile, during the fourth quarter, the VIX, an index of market-wide expectations of future volatility, had an average close below a fairly benign price of 14. The new year began closely in line with 2019, with volumes over 7.5 billion shares and the VIX hovering near 14. However, the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, and the attendant significant uncertainty regarding the ultimate micro- and macroeconomic fallout, delivered a series of significant market shocks.

This paper is the first in a series of four examining U.S. capital markets at the onset of the COVID crisis. In order of publication, these reports will provide a detailed look into the performance of the equities (including options), fixed income (U.S. Treasuries and credit), global interest-rate derivatives, and foreign exchange markets during the crisis in the first half of 2020.

Methodology:

This Greenwich Associates research is primarily based on data from the first half of 2020 that was analyzed in July and August and conversations with liquidity providers, investors, regulators, exchanges and trading platform operators. The analysis also utilized numerous sources of both public and private data, including but not limited to FINRA, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, OPRA, MarketAxess, Bloomberg, and BIS.

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
