

Buy-Side Trading Desk Budgets in 2021: Technology Pays Off

June 2, 2021

Executive Summary:

In a simplistic model of trading desk operations, there are two necessities: people (to trade) and technology (to facilitate those trades). As such, we have been tracking the proportion of the trading desk budgets allocated to these necessary inputs since 2015. In 2020, the average buy-side trading desk allocated 59% of its overall budget to people (through compensation) and 41% to technology. Over the years, the share of budget allocated to technology has slowly been creeping up.

Methodology:

418 buy-side traders across the Americas and EMEA were interviewed in Q3 and Q4 2020 as a part of its annual Market Structure & Trading Technology Study. Respondents were asked a series of qualitative and quantitative questions focusing on the organization of their trading desk, budgets and the technology tools used.

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
