

Client-Centricity: Building a Strategic Advantage through Superior Service

October 19, 2021

Executive Summary:

Asset managers are working to create “client-centric” business models that allow them to deliver superior service to all clients and to partner with their best clients as strategic advisors. This report examines what it means for an asset manager to adopt a client-centric approach and outlines the steps required to implement a truly client-centric strategy.

Those steps include monitoring and measuring service quality, staffing the client experience and creating strategic partnerships with top clients. The report also looks at how asset managers can elevate service through persona-based segmentation techniques that allow them to focus resources on the prospects and clients that are best aligned with the firm’s capabilities and approach, and offer the highest potential value to the firm.

The Document is not an investment analysis or research and is not subject to regulatory or legal obligations on the production of, or content of, investment analysis or research.

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
