

Three trends signal direction of European asset management

January 28, 2025

Executive Summary:

Investor optimism
holds strong as 21%
of European institutions
plan to hire a new asset manager in the year ahead

European investors enter 2025 with a surprising level of optimism given the set of economic, political and geopolitical challenges facing Europe's investment markets. In continental Europe, pension funds, insurers and other institutions expect to significantly increase allocations to equity and fixed-income products in the year ahead, while also increasing their exposures to alternative asset classes. In the United Kingdom, corporate plan sponsors are committed to immunizing defined benefit pension schemes and plan to continue that work by upping their allocations to liability-driven investment (LDI) strategies.

Methodology:

From January to August 2024, Crisil Coalition Greenwich conducted interviews with 252 of the largest institutional funds in the United Kingdom and 372 key decision-makers at the largest continental European institutional investors. Institutional investors in the U.K. included corporate funds, local authorities and other institutional funds. Institutions in continental Europe included corporate, public, and industry-wide defined-benefit, defined-contribution and hybrid pension funds, banks (including Sparkassen in Germany), foundations and churches, insurance and reinsurance companies, sovereign pension reserve funds, and other non-pension institutional investors including official institutions, central banks, monetary authorities, sovereign wealth funds, and supranationals.

Between April and July 2024, Crisil Coalition Greenwich conducted 180 interviews with some of the largest fund distributors in Europe. Senior gatekeepers were asked to provide detailed information on their business priorities, quantitative and qualitative evaluations of their investment managers, and qualitative assessments of those managers soliciting their business.

In 2024, Crisil Coalition Greenwich undertook a study with asset managers to assess the latest trends in product development and management. Globally, we gathered feedback from 74 senior stakeholders at 68 firms on their views of the current product landscape, including product development and management approaches and processes, differentiators, product shelf outlook, stakeholders and product review triggers. In addition, this report summarizes the findings from a flash study in August 2023 with 99 asset managers on the evolving role of AI in asset management.

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
