

Wanted: Reliable information and advice on tariffs

June 12, 2025

One pervasive problem for companies in 2025 has been difficulty obtaining reliable information about tariffs, and insights about how to best navigate a constantly shifting set of trade policies. Throughout this period, banks have proven to be a value source of advice to corporate leadership teams around the world.

Approximately 45% of large companies say they have turned to banks for strategic advice and/or implementation assistance with rapidly evolving tariff announcements. More than half of Asian companies and approximately 60% of consumer-facing companies say they are relying on banks for information and guidance on changes in global trade policy. At a global level, that puts banks at the top of the list, ahead of corporate peers (34%) and suppliers (32%), industry bodies and trade associations (29%), and strategy consultants (24%).

Going forward, banks have an opportunity to deepen client relationships and potentially create opportunities to expand relationships across banking, cash management and trade finance by proactively reaching out to companies with accurate and up-to-date information on fast-changing trade policy, and insights and ideas on how companies can navigate this new environment.

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
