

Platforms Battle for Share as eTrading Grows for Rates Products

September 26, 2014

Executive Summary:

Although ideally suited to electronic trading, the U.S. Treasury market saw a significant drop in e-trading volumes following the financial crisis.

Electronic trading in government bonds now surpasses pre-crisis levels, but short-term debt has been slower to recover.

In the dealer-to-client space, competition has been fierce between the two dominant firms—Bloomberg and Tradeweb. Greenwich Associates expects dealer-to-dealer platforms to slowly enter the client execution space as well, with BrokerTec and eSpeed being the primary players in the interdealer space.

Methodology:

Between February and April 2014, Greenwich Associates interviewed 1,067 U.S. institutional investors active in fixed income. Interview topics included trading and research activities and preferences, product and dealer use, service provider evaluations, market trend analysis, and investor compensation.

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
