

Less Than 10% of Managers are Short-Listed by Consultants

Will You Make it?

March 17, 2016

Formal meetings with investment consulting firms can be make-or-break moments for asset managers. Strengthening relationships with consultants and ultimately winning a prized spot on their selective shortlists hinges on a manager's performance in face-to-face formal meetings.

Our recently released white paper, Best Practices in Formal Meetings with Investment Consultant, helps guide managers through the preparation, execution and follow-up of these meetings.

The Bottom Line:

Consultant recommendations to institutional clients are selective and intermediaries only shortlist a small percentage of managers followed in their databases. To gain or retain a spot on these lists, managers need to master the preparation, execution and follow-up.

Best Practices in Formal Meetings with Investment Consultants will help you:

- Pick up tricks of the trade directly from the personal experience of investment consultants
- Better assess and address the specific needs of consultants and their clients
- Learn ways to reinforce your firm's investment philosophy and approach to client centricity

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
