

European Fixed Income: Importance of Primary Dealerships

May 4, 2016

Executive Summary:

Heightened regulatory pressures coupled with years of perennially low interest rates continue to stress banks' trading businesses.

In response to the deteriorating economics of the rates business, several banks have recently scaled back their roles as primary dealers in various European government bond markets. If anything, this would further squeeze liquidity out of fixed income markets—but equally important is how will this impact these dealers in other fixed-income businesses?

Methodology:

From June to August 2015, Greenwich Associates conducted over 1,200 fixed-income interviews with institutional investors across Europe. Investors were asked to rank their top 10 dealers by asset class (government bonds, investment-grade credit, covered bonds, interest-rate derivatives, etc.), and provide volume allocations that each of their counterparties earns within each product. The above data is based on analyzing institutions active in multiple asset classes, and evaluates the correlation of the wallet share a dealer earns from an institution in government bonds vs. other asset classes (investment-grade credit, interest-rate derivatives, covered bonds, etc.).

The data contained in the Document is based upon a particular bank's scope, which reflects a bank's data submission, business structure, and sales revenue Reporting methodology. As a result, any data contained in the Document may not be directly comparable to data presented to another bank. For franchise benchmarking, Crisil Coalition Greenwich has implemented equal ranking logic on aggregate results i.e., when sales revenues are within 5% of at least one competitor ahead, a tie is shown and designated by = (where actual ranks are shown). Entity level data has no equal ranking logic implemented and therefore, on occasion, the differences between rank bands can be very close mathematically.

The data in this Document may reflect the views reported to Crisil Coalition Greenwich by the research participants. Interviewees may be asked about their use of and demand for financial products and services and about investment practices in relevant financial markets. Crisil Coalition Greenwich compiles the data received, conducts statistical analysis and reviews for presentation purposes to produce the final results.
